ABSTRACT

This report series defines and measures the "information activity" within the national economy. "Information activity" is defined to include those specific industries and occupations whose primary function is to produce, process, or transmit economically valuable information. Changes in the national labor force are analyzed over a 120-year span. This volume contains the 1967 Inverse Matrices with detail at both the 108 and 190 industry levels. This is backup information to Chapters 6 and 10 of Volume I (IR 005 061). (Author/DAG)

FOREWORD

Physics, a discipline at the heart of our last major technological revolution, yields a quotation that is highly appropriate to the present work:

> When you can measure what you are speaking about, and express it in numbers, you know something about it; but when you cannot measure it, when you cannot express it in numbers, your knowledge is of a meager and unsatisfactory kind: it may be the beginning of knowledge, but you have scarcely, in your thoughts, advanced to the stage of science.
>
> -- William Thomson, Lord Kelvin
> (1824-1907) English Physicist

Notions of yet another major revolution, one that will bring about a "post-industrial" society, have been in the air for some time now. Yet, few steps toward the measurement of this revolution's most important element -- information activities -- were taken until Dr. Porat began the investigation that is reported in these volumes. We might say, then, that this study, truly a seminal one, pushes our knowledge of an information economy closer to "the stage of science."

This report proposes a conceptual framework for defining the information activities of an advanced economy, and prescribes an objective way to quantify them. Without such definition and measurement, I cannot imagine how we can formulate sound policy for an information society. The fact that so many information policy issues are pressing upon us adds to the pertinence of the research.

It may strike some as odd that the Office of Telecommunications. an organization concerned principally with telecommunications technology, would offer a report dealing with the whole range of information activities. The explanation lies in the need to view telecommunications in the larger context of its effects on other aspects of society. Satellite networks, for example, can be an instrument for regional economic development. Retail terminals can perform banking functions. And electronic communications is steadily diminishing the volume of traditional postal delivery. Thus, it is essential to appreciate how issues internal to telecommunications influence other kinds of information activities. Conversely, ways of achieving broader policy objectives might well produce decisions affecting telecommunications services. I have in mind such goals as the provision of equal access to high-quality health care or the expansion of continuing education, both of which obviously can be facilitated by the electronic media. To the extent that telecommunications and its sister technology, computers, are at the core of the infrastructure of the information society, their relationships with the larger society are every bit as important as their internal problems.

The concepts and methods described in these volumes have begun to attract wide national and international notice. They are cited by officials of the Congress, the Executive Branch, and the regulatory agencies. They are being studied by international organizations. Yet, in spite of all the acknowledgments, this study constitutes only a point of departure toward a more complete understanding of the information society. We must devise and test alternative representations of the information economy against this one. We still have to settle on the best model, achieve comparability among models in other countries, produce trend data, and construct the methods for predicting consequences of alternative policy decisions.

I am confident that this additional work will be taken up by others. Moreover, I believe that their efforts will sharpen these concepts into a new tool, a tool of great value because of its clear relevance to the course of our world's complex societies.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

Science, commerce and technology are inextricably interconnected in American society. It is therefore fitting that this effort to clarify one aspect of their impact was a joint project of the National Science Foundation and the Department of Commerce. The National Science Foundation provided the funds needed to undertake the project, the Department of Commerce the institutional setting in which to conduct it. The bond was cemented through a common concern with telecommunications technologies and policies.

We were particularly motivated by the prospect of increasing the substance surrounding fascinating concepts about the changing nature of American society. The evident acceleration in invention and application of information technologies and the social and economic change which accompanies this development, is directly relevant to a wide range of policy concerns.

The findings of this research are provocative and concise. We trust that they will stimulate and illuminate public discussion. The report describes some of the ways in which the findings have been applied thus far. Yet it is clear that this work is an incremental contribution and that much remains to be accomplished. Work has begun in the U.S. and abroad to extend the data base developed in the project. I extend an invitation to readers to contribute their reactions to the report and their ideas on further research.

THE INFORMATION ECONOMY Report Series totals nine volumes, each of which has its own subtitle.

77-12(1) -- THE INFORMATION ECONOMY: Definition and Measurement -- Dr. Marc Uri Porat -- 265 pp.

This volume contains the executive summary and the major findings of the study. It defines information activity and includes a formal set of National Income and Product Accounts for the primary and secondary information sectors, with input-output matrices for both of these sectors. In addition, it specifies the information-related occupations of both the primary and secondary information sectors; this includes a consideration of private and public bureaucracies. Finally, it presents lists of information policy issues pertaining to industry, government, and the home and makes two recommendations as to how the Federal government might meet the public policy issues posed by the expansion of our information activity.

77-12(2) -- THE INFORMATION ECONOMY: Sources and Methods for Measuring the Primary Information Sector (Detailed Industry Reports) -- Dr. Marc Uri Porat -- 188 pp.

This volume presents reports of the 25 major industries that compose the primary information sector. The volume's classification scheme is based on the Bureau of Economic Analysis Input-Output Matrix. Each industry is discussed in great detail. The discussions include the reasoning behind considering the industry as part of the primary information sector, a breakdown of the subordinate industries that compose the larger industrial category, a narrative of the informational aspects of the industry, and a report of the final demand and value-added components. The service, manufacturing, and construction sectors of the economy are considered.

To Fritz Machlup and Daniel Bell I owe a deep intellectual debt for plowing the field so thoroughly and proficiently before me. After their contribution, mine was simply to harvest the crop that they had planted; and there is ample left for future researchers who wish to embark on this new line of research.

My early ideas, ill formed and overly ambitious, were skillfully and gently molded by the able hands of Professors Edwin Parker and James Rosse. They had the good sense to say both yes and no at just the right moments, and were always accessible when I needed guidance. The last and most critical year of this work was made possible through the good graces of Dr. John Richardson, Director of the Office of Telecommunications, who gave freely of his encouragement and support, and who smoothed the bureaucratic wrinkles when they seemed to mount like tidal waves. He understood the policy implications of this work before most.

Generous financial support from the National Science Foundation was the lifeblood for this project. Dr. Charles Brownstein (RANN/Division of Advanced Productivity Research and Technology) managed the project most professionally, and his advice and consent were very helpful and greatly appreciated.

Over the course of the project, I drew heavily on the talents and energies of many people, and to them I extend a special gratitude. Michael Rubin, who joined me nearly three years ago, single handedly slew the computer dragon. His all night sessions outnumbered mine by two to one, and resulted in Chapters 6, 7, & 10. Joseph Kashi assembled most of the government and labor data of Chapters 7 and 8. Deborah Semb and Barbara Mikelson delivered the National Income and Product Accounts and time series of Chapters 4 and 5.

From the thousand and one production nightmares, I was rescued by the skill and perseverance of Fran Sills. She administered endless drafts of tables and text with dispatch and poise, working many evenings and weekends at top efficiency. Her performance in this project was superb. Glynetta Perrymore endured the dark ages of word processing through five complete drafts of the text. Edith Uunila thoroughly and competently helped with the final stages of proofreading and editing.

Along the road, many kind people lent me a helping hand. At the Bureau of Economic Analysis, I was given free reign by Philip Ritz, Chief of the Interindustry Division. Carolyn Knapp and Elizabeth Spaulding helped with the more obscure procedures used in the national accounts. Howard Schreier helped with programming the final demand and value added tables.

At the Bureau of Labor Statistics, I extend my thanks to Charles Bowman and the input-output staff of the Economic Growth Project. The early labor data were provided by John Shew and Karen Hassmer, and their help is acknowledged.

Although I gratefully share the credit with my friends and colleagues, I relieve them of any responsibility for remaining errors.

Table 2:	Total Requirements (Direct and Indirect) Per Dollar of Delivery to Final Demand, 1967	33

This report contains the following backup information to Chapters 6 and 10 of Volume I:

(i) A description of the 108- and 190-order "Total Effect," or Inverse matrices, and a discussion of their potential research uses.

(ii) A discussion on the sources and methods used in producing the matrices.

(iii) The 108- and 190-order Inverse matrices, showing the total requirements of an industry for the delivery to final demand of one dollar of output (Tables 1 and 2).

Description and Uses

The "Total Effect," or Inverse matrices, show the dollar value of the output required, directly and indirectly, from all other industries to produce a given industry's output. Reading down a column, each cell represents the dollar value of the direct and indirect output required by the column industry from the row industry.

The 108-order Inverse matrix contains the 82 industries published by the Bureau of Economic Analysis, and an additional 26 primary information industries which have been broken out of the original BEA table. A primary information industry is one which directly produces information goods and services. For example, a firm which specializes in keeping other firms' business records would be considered part of a primary information industry under this definition.

In the 190-order Inverse matrix, the 82 noninformation industries of the 108-order matrix have been split into their respective information and noninformation components. The information elements of these new industries are the secondary information industries. For example, the accounting department of a company producing lead ball bearings is part of a secondary information industry under this definition.

The Inverse matrix is an extremely interesting and valuable research and policy tool. The effect of a change in demand upon total output, and upon total employment, is easily measured. A vector of each industry's demand is multiplied "through" the matrix to calculate the total output produced by that demand. A more in-depth discussion of this procedure, and examples of experiments using this economic model, may be found in Appendix 6 (Vol. 8).

Sources and Methods

An Inverse matrix is created through a series of mathematical computations too complex to be easily described. For the purposes of this report, it is sufficient to state that computer programs exist to "invert" technology matrices. One such computer program, the Bureau of Labor Statistics' "Economic Growth Input-Output Software System," was used for this research. The technology matrices described in Appendices 6 and 10 (Vol. 4) are the underlying matrices for the 108-order and 190-order tables respectively.

15. ABSTRACT (A 200-word or less factual summary of most significant information. If document includes a significant bibliography or literature survey, mention it here.)

This report series defines and measures the "information activity" within the national economy. "Information activity" is defined to include those specific industries and occupations whose primary function is to produce, process or transmit economically valuable information. Changes in the national labor force are analyzed over a 120-year span. Information activities have grown dramatically over the last several decades, until they employed 46% of the labor force in 1970. National Income and Product accounts are analyzed to determine the contribution of the information activities to wages and capital expenditures. Information workers earned 53% of total wages in 1970; 46% of value added was derived from information activities in 1967. Input-Output tables have been constructed which show the detailed structure of the information economy.

Volumes 1 and 2 summarize the findings. Volumes 3, 4, and 5 set forth the Input-Output tables. Volumes 6 through 8 detail the workforce and National Income accounts. Volume 9 describes the database available on computer readable magnetic tape.
